

Title: Antidote Formula

This process must be fulfilled exactly as it is written here. Any deviation or lack may meet with catastrophic failure and death.

I know, for I created the Papuan poison.

The following materials must be found and used in a fresh state (no more than two days old).

The formula must be made within two days or complete failure will result.

This amount is the dosage enough to fully cure one person of the poisoning if imbibed entirely at one time.

The measure is no more than one full goblet.

REAGENTS

1 Vial of Demon's blood (that of a lesser demon, not an imp).

1 sliver of Dead Wood.

1 Greater Cure Potion

1 Executioner Cap.

1 Vial of powdered Blackmoor.

1 Vial of powdered Demon Bone.

6 Vials of Fresh Water.

FORMULATION

Take all the non-liquid reagents and grind them as finely as you can and place them in a clean flask. Add the blood and water and stir or shake until a thick broth is created.

Heat the mixture for ten minutes over the open flame of an alchemist's candle or until bubbles appear. Take the flask from the heat and allow it to cool completely.

Stir it again. It should smell like rotten meat and will be most foul to the taste.

CONSUMPTION

Imbibe the contents of the flask at once while a mage casts three spells in quick succession upon he who drinks it:

Vas An Nox twice, then Uus Mani.

The combination of the ingredients and spells will destroy the poison within the body.

Note: This is only an antidote! It is not a preventative. It has one great boon however. Once cured by this antidote, the poison, if imbibed or injected into the person who has taken it, will not affect him again. In short, it provides complete immunity henceforth.

Note: Lord Thrax is likely giving the antidote without the spells. The spells are necessary. Without it, the antidote can only suppress the poison for a time, not remove it from the body.
